

Effort Certification for Nonexempt Employees

Summary/Purpose: Effort directly charged to, or cost shared on, federal or state funded sponsored projects must be certified through the university's electronic effort reporting system. Using suitable means of verification, Principal Investigator(s) must certify that effort percentages reasonably reflect actual effort devoted to their sponsored agreement(s) by employees during the certification period. There are three certification periods for the university that coincide with the spring, summer and fall academic semesters.

Effort is reported as a percentage of total activities, not of total hours worked. Therefore, all of an employee's compensated activities equal 100% effort regardless of the number of hours worked per week in which the activities are accomplished. Employees working 100% on sponsored projects must ensure they are not performing any other university duties without adjusting their effort accordingly to reflect those duties.

Effort certifications must be completed within a reasonable time (typically within 60 days after the end of the certification period). Failure to certify effort on a timely basis may result in project accounts being locked pending receipt of the reports.

Adjustments or cost transfers of wages should be timely processed before the end of the certification period. Once a certification period has ended, adjustments or cost transfers must be made via the effort certification process. Payroll distribution and effort as certified must be within a 5% variance.
